

Soviet M-43 reproduction Uniform, complete set of tunic and trousers, style with external breast pockets and subdued buttons.

CollectRussia is pleased to offer the next generation of Soviet WW2 reproduction uniforms.

These high quality garments are made in Russia and are as close to authentic WW2 uniforms as can be found today. With some field wear and sun fading, these would be very difficult to distinguish from originals.

The tunics and trousers have been designed from the ground up for maximum historical accuracy. Using originals as a pattern, our manufacturer worked with textile plants to create and dye fabric to WW2 specifications. He also sought out thread of correct color and diameter.

An extra large sized tunic - but keep in mind these field garments were not meant to be close fitting, like tailored service uniforms. Note that the trousers have a 36" waist even though the tunic is much bigger - this marked size difference was so that soldiers would have ample room to move comfortably.

These are new and each set is in mint, unissued condition.

Please note, these are sold only as sets, and include only the tunic and the pants. The shoulder boards, medal, and other equipment shown in our photos are not included in the purchase price.

We currently have this external pocket version of the M-43 tunic with subdued buttons in stock in this Soviet military size:

50/4 Set Tunic: about a US size 44 -- measures approximately 24" across the chest from seam to seam under the armpits. 19" across the chest from sleeve seam to sleeve seam at the level of the 2nd button. 18" neck opening at collar. Length from top of collar to bottom hem 33" Length of sleeve from shoulder seam 25"

Trousers about a US size 36. About 18" across the top above the belt loops. 32" inseam, 46" from top to cuffs.

Based on photographic evidence, it seems that far more NKVD troops wore M-43 tunics with external pockets than any other category of Soviet soldier in WW 2.
