

"The Capture of a German Supply Train by Cossacks".

German infantrymen throw their hands in the air as they try to surrender to the Cossacks boldly plowing into their ranks.

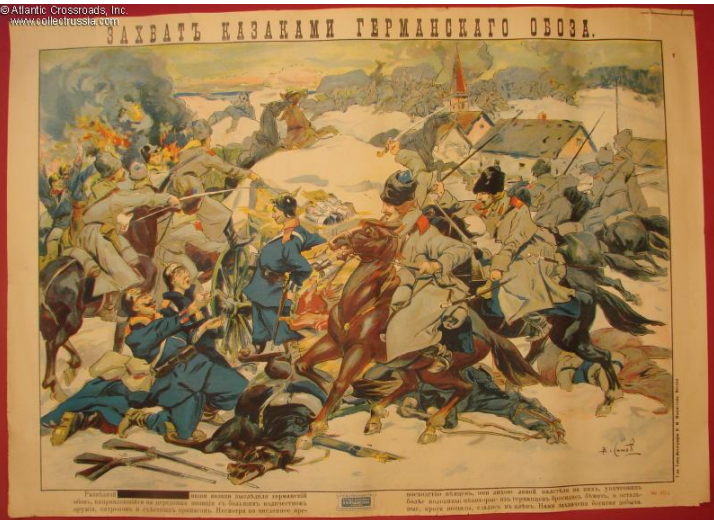

Medium Size: measures 23" x 16 1/2". Marked with the logo of the Moscow based Mashistov lithography firm in blue in the right margin.

The enemy soldiers seen here cower in front of the onrushing Russian cavalrymen; one weeps while others raise their hands to surrender. "Through the reconnaissance of ***** [unit name removed by military censor] our Cossacks spied a German supply train heading for the forward positions with a large amount of weapons, ammunition cartridges and food provisions. Despite the numerical superiority of the Germans, the [Cossacks] charged upon them in a dashing charge destroying over half; some of the Germans took to flights while the others surrendered seeking quarter. We captured a large amount of booty. "

The print is in good overall condition. The colors are remarkably fresh. For best display, we would recommend mounting it on linen. The edges show a few of the very minor tears attributable to prolonged storage. The lower left hand corner once showed a minor crumple; it was taken care of by the application of acid-free tape.

Разведкой [redacted] наши казаки выследили германский обоз, направившийся на передовые позиции с большим количеством оружия, патронов и съестных припасов. Несмотря на численное пре-восходство немцев, они лихою лавой налетели на них, уничтожив бодле половины: некоторые из германцев бросились бжать, а остальные, прося пощады, сдались в плен. Нами захвачена богатая добыча.
