

Army Officer "Sam Browne" Leather Belt with Shoulder Strap, for service or field uniform, dated 1990.

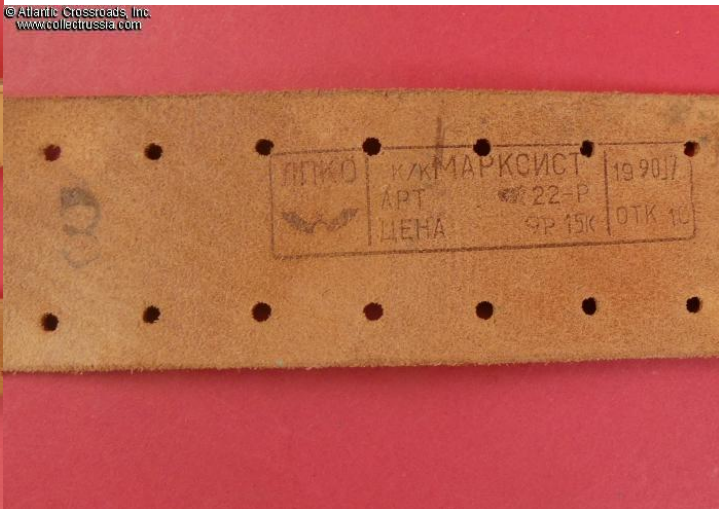

In brown leather, complete with matching shoulder strap and brass buckle with two prongs. Attractive chocolate brown finish with orange stitching. The underside has the maker's mark of the Leningrad's Marxist Factory showing 1990 date of manufacture and "OTK" quality inspection stamp.

There is also an ink quality control stamp to the underside of the shoulder strap. Extra Large size: the leather portion is 49" when fully extended; using only the existing holes, the belt will fit a range of about 39" to 42" waist (there is a possibility to extend it by up to two inches or reduce to almost any smaller size by making additional holes if needed).

In outstanding, excellent condition, appears to be unused. The leather is perfectly supple and healthy, not dry; both the exterior and interior have none of the usual scuffs or scratches and remain perfectly clean. The brass buckles and D-rings, as well as the nickel-plated steel rivets are free of oxidation.
